THE FUTURE OF MAN-MADE HUMANS

Amid current claims of the actual cloning of a child, a Harvard law professor will discuss science fiction and legal thought in the modeling of life in a series of lectures at Georgetown University on April 4, 5, 11 and 12.

"Clones, Cyborgs and Chimeras" will be presented by Laurence H. Tribe in four lectures sponsored by GU's Kennedy Institute of Ethics. Tribe, the youngest professor ever to gain tenure at Harvard's School of Law, will highlight the 1978 edition of the Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Lecture Series to be held in Gaston Hall (Healy Building, main campus at 37th and O Streets, N.W.).

The four lectures will cover a wide range of subjects: April 4, "From Bio-Fantasy to Bio-Technology: In Whose Image?"; April 5, "The Fourth Discontinuity: Toward a Rebirth of Moral Reason in the Post-Biological Era"; April 11, "Science, Art, Law: Three Windows in a Hall of Mirrors"; April 12, "Imagining the Present: Beyond Bio-Engineering".

For more information on this lecture series contact David Fulghum, 625-4151.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR POST OFFICE

"To improve and expedite our mail service, it would be very helpful to us if all campus mail would come to us with complete addresses. This includes the addressees full name, and department or building. Your completing the addresses would eliminate the time we spend trying to locate individuals. We would also like for you to notify your outside correspondents of your complete address, that will enable us to route the mail to its proper destination on campus more quickly and more efficiently.

"Your cooperation in helping us make the service better is greatly appreciated."

HISTORICAL BUILDINGS ON CAMPUS - COLLEGE HALL

The development of the Gallaudet College campus coincided with a period when there was a growing taste for many expressive and romantic elements -- arches, towers and elaborate ornamentation which appeared in earlier European Gothic Architecture. This style, known as Victorian Gothic was in its heyday during the 1860's and 1870's when Frederick Withers, an outstanding architect of his time, was asked to design the major buildings on Gallaudet's newly developing campus.

College Hall was built to have a purely functional purpose serving as the main college building with classrooms, lecture halls, a library, student and faculty living quarters, a museum and offices. The structure which stands today is actually two buildings -- the small rectangular portion to the east constructed in 1866 and the major part of the building designed by Withers and built between 1874-77. Although richly ornamented, College Hall still projects a sense of solidarity, character and permanence which were so important to the Victorians.
